Stone Arabia

In 1723 a tract of land in the district afterwards known as Palatine was bought of the Mohawk Indians, by certain German Palatines; the purchase was confirmed by letters patent from the king. It contained 12,700 acres of land, and, for some unknown reason, was named Stone Arabia.

At this time, after a settlement of fifty years, it was one of the most flourishing and prosperous sections of Ireton County. The land was ^{of} surpassing fertility, and the farms and buildings, horses and cattle, gave evidence of thrift, peace, and contentment.

There were two churches standing in the little hamlet, and on the glebe land was the churchyard.

There were fewer Tories than in other districts; the people had suffered too much in their own land on the Rhine, from the offensive acts of kings, to bear with any patience those of the English rulers, and as the people were nearly all ardent and outspoken patriots.

They suffered equally in the war with the other sections of Ireton County. Lurking Indians and Tories constantly harassed them in the fields, stealing, and bearing away many prisoners. Finally, in the great raid of October, 1780, the whole settlement was laid waste; the houses, barns, and churches burned, the people killed and dispersed, and a ruin and desolation were left.

It was at this time that the action known as the Battle of Stone Arabia was fought, in which Col. John (over)

June 16, 1793 Esther, dau. of do do do

You may have already copied the above items.
If not, they might indicate some important incidents in the Brune Hough - Mary Walker family

As you must see, it records the marriage in 1790, with baptism of two children, as one would believe possible in a normal family.

But why no more children? Maybe it indicates the removal of the family from Ernesttown to somewhere.

Please co-relate with your information, and please let me know what you decide about the controversy

Sincerely

Dr H. C. Burleigh

Dear Mr. Benson,

I noticed your query in the Autumn, 1966 copy of The Loyalist Gazette, but have not taken time to write to you before, partly because I have been busy along other lines of research, and partly because I could not see how our two Hough-Huff families are related.

First of all, I should say that I have seen the name spelled both ways in the family letters. In a letter written by Grandma Downey in 1923 she spells it Huff. In the appeal for land, 1784, Barnabas spells his name Hough. He was her great-grandfather. From this I am certain it was pronounced Huff.

She also says the family came from Holland. Her sister said the family came from the Palatinate, but she could have been referring to another old branch of the family, the Browers.

Here is my meagre bit of information:

Remarks:

Barnabas Hough was a blacksmith in the States. He lost all his property, 100 acres, 2 yoke of oxen, 2 cows, 7 hogs, utensils, and tools, taken by the rebels in 1777, when Barnabas went to join Burgoyne. Also dwelling house and blacksmith shop, and personal items.

Barnabas took sick and 'was left sick when Burgoyne was taken'. Went into Canada in July, 1778. Served in Jessup's Regiment all the war. Was residing in St. John, N. H. in 1783. Lived at Paulet, Vermont.

Sarah Hough married Alexander Nicholson and was my husband's direct ancestress. Legend says they were married at Mt. Pleasant, near Lake Champlain, but this has never been proven, nor the year.

'Sandy' Nicholson came from Scotland where he was born June 19, 1752, possibly in Glasgow, possibly in Aberdeenshire, son of Robert. Sandy came to America in 1774, a former ensign in the British Navy (I think), who took up 200 acres near William's Town and he said 'it lay on the lines between Massts. and York Govt.' He bought the land in 1776, joined the British forces in 1777 and was taken prisoner at the Battle of Bennington that same year. 'The rebels took him as a slave and he was obliged to work out his freedom.' I think he must have joined the British again, because the land appeal says he served all the war, except the time he was prisoner.

When he was taken prisoner, all his stock were taken and sold after the Battle of Bennington, 2 horses, 2 cows, 1 heifer, 2 hogs, joiners tools, and his land.
